STATE OF MOROCCO.

GOING FROM BAD TO WORSE.

INTERVENTION EXPECTED.

TANGIER, November 19. The condition of things is going from bad to worse. Europeans are looking forward to intervention on the part of France and Spain. It is understood that both countries are making preparations to avoid being taken unawares when the moment for action arrives. (Reuter)

THE BOER RAID.

HOW IT WAS FRUSTRATED.

CAPETOWN, November 19. Ferreira's followers were worn out and disheartened and offered no resistance. The trouble caused by them was altogether disproportionate to their strength. Troops formed a cordon of 1'0 miles, from the Orange River to the Kalahari desert, overcoming immense difficulties, scarcity of water, heat, and dust storms. They dispensed with transport and lived on country. (Router)

GERMAN POLICY.

DISSATISFACTION IN FATHERLAND.

The newspapers, including the Conservative Press, continue to publish articles expressing intense dissatisfaction with the situation at home and abroad, which they attribute largely to the Emperor's constant personal interven-tion. They strongly orge the necessity for remedy. Prince von Bulow's speech has not allayed the popular discontent with the foreign (Reuter)

GERMANY AND DENMARK.

KINGLY AMENITIES.

BERLIN, November 19. The King and Queen of Denmark have arrived, and were received cordially. In his toast at the banquet, the Emperor said that he was convinced that intimate relations would be maintained for the greatest good of both nations. The King replied that he hoped their relations would become more and more (Havas)

SUFFRAGETTE DEMONSTRATION.

ANOTHER ARREST.

LONDON, November 19. Forty Soffregettes, headed by General French's sister and Mrs. Despard, made a fresh demonstration in Palace Yard. Mrs. Despard and another lady mounted the pedestal of a statue. The latter lady harangued the meeting. She was arrested. The police refused to arrest Mrs. Despard despite her entreaties. (Reuter)

BRITISH SCHOOL OF ARCHÆOLOGY IN EGYPT.

NEED FOR PRESENT SUPPORT.

Sir Robert Heneley presided at the annual meeting of the British School of Archaelegy in Egypt and the Egyptian Research Account which took place at the University College, Undon, last Saturday week.

The Chairman, in opening, spoke of the flourishing state of the school. He also referred to the greatly increased interest which is taken in Egypt, and to the demand that the proof that country has made for young sperity of that country has made for young men trained in a knowledge of the language and with a personal acquaintance with the best specimens of the inhabitants and with the districts which the ordinary traveller gets no acquaintance with. That was prec the kind of training which the British School of Archwology was capable of affording in s way in which, perhaps, no other agency was capable of affording it. Lord Cromer himself was personally very well disposed towards the School, and gave it his cordial support. (Cheers.)

Statements showing the great progress of the school were made by Dr. J. H. Walker and Mrs. Petrie, the hon. secretaries, and it was announced that Lord Cremer had consented to be patron of the school. The Treasurer, Mr. Hilton Price, gave a most satisfacaccount of the finances of the school and research account.

Professor Flinders Petrie, in the course of an address, said it was rarely that a new move-ment for scientific research had become established so quickly and decisively as the British School of Archæology in Egypt. When in May last year the necessity for such an organiza-tion was forced upon him by external circumstances he could not anticipate that so substantial an instrument of research would hearty interest was felt in the recovery of the history and civilization of Egypt. Their assured comparable with the richly endowed French School, the many official enterprises of German studies. The labour of collecting with one hand while spending with the other was, indeed almost impossible; and but for the unceasing work of organizing and correspondence carried on by his wife (cheers) there would have be no such meeting as that which was held that day. The direction of bundreds of workmen the management of the large collections, the publication of full memoirs of results were alone enough to require undivided attention; and, while thanking them most heartly for the while that are the critical position in which their work stood last year, he must trust that they would remember how impossible all that activity in Egypt would be without their support and that of their friends. work of the past season proved the richest istorical harvest that he had known. The Hyksos camp and cemetery, the city of Raamses, and the temple and town of Onias had all consolidated their vague impressions and scanty literary statements in a most satisfactory manner. The three students who went out with him largely contributed to their results, and his wife drew 50 plates; they were able to keep two camps at work, and altogether to examine six sites. This year there would be six students at work, one of whom, Mrs. Firth, had done admirable drawings for previous volumes at the Mastabas of Sakkara; while another student had had museum experience at Edinburgh, and had the sanction of the Sducation Department to include Egyptian work in his studies. The ground on which they were permitted to work was in three districts First, they should begin on the desert between Giza and Abusir ; tombs of the first, the second and third dynasties were already known there and it was the most promising site available and it was the most promising site availante for accertaining the civilization between the great ages of the first and foorth dynasties. Whether there was a great decline in the interval was one of the urgent problems in history. Secondly, they might work between Assiout and Sohag with a view to trying for any light between the seventh and 11th dynas ies, as tombs of the ninth dynasty were known there. Lastly, the temple site of the importan city of Athribis ought to be found, and perhaps they might search for it. At each of these sites the need of work was urgent. Not only was there the ceaseless destruction carried on by the native, and the almost equally destructive excavations of the licensed digger, who did no work scientifically or publish all his results but in the last year or two there had been fearsome activity in selling off Governmen lands to speculators. The great cemetery of Heliopolis was sold; the cemetery of Tell Yehudiyeh with the Hyksos graves was sold and only by a rare chance was he allowed to work in it ; the town of Goshen was sold, and work there was impossible; land below the pyramid hill was sold; most of the site of

They must face the fact that, while debarred by one department from working on the most important sites, they were seeing the ground rapidly out from under their feet by the other department. The only possible course seemed to be to work out the sites in danger as rapidly as possible ; not to spend a pound or a day over clearing up monuments which were already recognized and not in danger, but to exhaust as quickly as they could the ground which might soon pass irrevocably into specu-lative hands. They did not ask them and the public in general for any long continued sup-port; the next few years would see the larger part of the openings for work finally closed. That was not like a sulject of natural science which could generally be done in the next generation; here they wanted to put in as many salvage men as possible before the chances of rescue had vanished. Let them try to concentrate all their resources on Egypt for a few years, knowing that there would be out little need of such work ten years hence the history would have vanished for ever by hat time. Such was the prospect, such were their claims to-day, and the response in the past year gave him hopes that they might yet see more workers and more means for the English share of the rescue of Egyptian history. (Loud cheers.)

CROSSING THE SAHARA.

BRITISH RESIDENT'S ADVENTUROUS JOURNEY.

Interesting letters have been received from Mr. Hans Vischer, British Resident at Kuka, Lake Chad, who is now undertaking a dangerons journey through the forbidden hinterland of Tripoli across the great Sahara to Lake Chad. In the course of the description of his journey Mr. Vischer says: —"In the mountains of Gharian I found to my astonishment people living in subterranean dwellings. Through be so preedily entrusted to their committee entrances ten yards long and one broad we by the public. Within a year and a half the came upon a square courtyard, which is in collection of over £3,000 had shown what a reality a great hole open to the sky. Upon this all the rooms and stables converge. The rooms were very dark, and there were no position for future work needed now to be window, but the most absolute cleanliness thoroughly maintained, in order to make it prevailed. Round the courtyard runs a wall which protects the dwelling underneath."

At this point Mr. Vischer met Djamy Bey, Oriental work, and the Royal undertakings of the Torkish officer who was to accompany him Italy. The public must always remember that to Murzuk. The Bey had with him an Arab other Governments regarded the historical Sbeikh and a large caravan. Taking with him researches of their countries as matters of some of the worst of his blacks Mr. Visoher public concern; while Eegland alone left its workers to struggle for the means of Egyptian of the Hammada, following Barth's route via Misda, the remainder of the caravan going on behind. On the march from Taboura to the Hammada Desert Mr. Visober found many Roman remains. "I made," continues Mr. Vischer, "some interesting observations in the desert. The difference between the night and day temperature is always at least 20deg. (Celsius). Beyond Gharian the ground rises up to the hills, where fig and olive groves lie among Roman ruins and underground villages. As we approached Murzuk we came across lovely stretches of petrified forest."

Writing from Murzak on Aug. 24th, Mr. Vischer cays: "We arrived here yesterday. I was received with great honour by the Governor of Fezzan, and a beautiful house has been placed at my disposal. I received an official invitation to the enthronement of the Sultan, and a review of the garrison was held." Another letter, dated Murzak, Sept. 21st, emphasizes the great friendliness of the people, and says that the caravan is on the point of starting for Lake Chad. Messages had been sent on by the Pasha at Muzuk to two headmen at Tiberti to convoy the British Resident.
"Within three days," writes Mr. Vischer, "we hope to be in Gatro, in twenty days in Bilma, and in forty days in Kuka. Everything is in good order, and the members of the caravan are perfectly quiet. I leave at Marzak Djamy Bey, who accompanied me to that point."

In every direction the chances of recovering history were disappearing for ever.
